

THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1745.

Yesterday arriv'd a Mail from Holland.

Petersburgh, January 10.

HE Imperial Princess, and the Duchess of Anhalt Zerbst, are in good Health, tho' they do not stir out of their Palace, on account of the Indisposition of the Grand Prince, and the Absence of the Czarina. The Return of her Imperial Majesty, however, will not exceed a Week; and we have the Satisfaction of hearing, that his Imperial Highness is in no Danger; but, on the contrary, it is hoped that the Pox will carry off effectually that febrile Matter, which has disturbed his Highness so much of late. There is a Rumour here, that her Imperial Majesty is to accede to an Alliance lately concluded. What Resolution may be taken in that Respect, is uncertain; but we are very positive, that the present unsettled State of Affairs, her Imperial Majesty will be sure to keep up such a Force, as her Interposition respected.

January 12. There arrived here on the 9th, in the Afternoon, a Courier from Corunna, with important News, that Admiral Torres arrived in the Havanna on the 5th, with the Squadron in Command, having on board the Treasure of Spain, amounting to about 12 Millions, of which, for the King, exclusive of the Indulto; the Trade; besides four Millions more on board the Ships that came under his Convoy. The Monemar is declared President of the Council, and appears to have greater Credit at Court. The Duke d'Attri is at the Point of Death. Marquis de Lede is extremely ill. We learn, that on the last Day of the Year, the Chevalier failed with a French Squadron of Nine Ships from that Port, for America.

January 13. The Senate have elected the Chevalier Tron, who is, at present, Minister from France, to the States General, to succeed the late Andrew Cornaro, their Ambassador at the Hague, lately deceased. On the 17th there fell a greater Quantity of Snow than has been for 30 Years past; by reason of which, the Duke de Borta, who set out the Day before for the Army in Italy, was obliged to return hither, being become absolutely impassable. We hear, that the Republick has issued, lately, Commissions for raising Troops, notwithstanding the Opposition given them by a certain Court, that proceeding would be regarded as a Breach of Neutrality.

January 16. On the opening the Body of the late Majesty, his Lungs appeared absolutely sound; but the Physicians cannot agree, whether he died before or since his Decease: His Spleen was in the same Condition; and there was an Abscess in the Cavities of the Heart; and in the great Vessels was found a Stone of the Size of a Pigeon's Egg. The Body was deposited in the Vault of his Majesty, on the 21st. The Field Marshal Count de Saxe, who has been, for some time past, troubled with Inflammation in his Eyes, has actually lost one Eye, and is in very great Danger of losing the other. The Count de Königseldt, Vice-Chancellor of the Empire, is also much indisposed. What has been said of a speedy Journey of our Elector, is very uncertain. On the 23d his Serene Highness held a grand Council with his Ministers, and afterwards spent some time alone with the Count de Preysing, who is at the Head of Affairs; but, as yet, it is uncertain what Turn Things will take; every-body according to his own Sentiments, and without any Party that can be depended on.

January 20. The Grand Duke of Tuscany arrived this Afternoon, from Olmutz; where he and Queen of Poland arrived later than they expected, the Inroads of the Prussian Hussars obliging their Majesties to take the Road of Silesia, instead of that of Troppau, which they proposed. It is a little uncertain, whether Prince Charles will return or not, to the Army in Silesia; and who will command the Army in the next Campaign in the Empire. Baron de Saxe is perfectly recovered, had, within these few Days, an Audience of her Majesty, and was very much pleased. He refused, during his late Indisposition, that his Leg should be cut off; declaring positively, that he would die, rather than submit to the Operation; as a Proof of which, he made his Will; and having no Family, he left all his Effects to her Majesty, except a Legacy of 12,000 Florins to the City of Chamb, in Bavaria, where he obtained, some Years ago, so great a Booty. It appears from the publick Registers of this City, that in the last Year, 1744, there died 4323 Persons, of which 936 were Men, 1100 Women, 1235 Male Children, and 1052 Female. There were born and baptized 4483. Amongst those who died, there was One of 106, One of 104, and One of 101 Years of Age.

Notwithstanding the positive Advices we have from Madrid, as to the Galleons, there are private Letters from Cadiz which assure us, that no more than two Ships of War arrived with Admiral Torres, having on board 8,274,565 Pieces of Eight; they sailed from the Havanna on the 10th of November, and arrived at Corunna the 5th of January.

The Duke de Aremberg had no sooner an Account of the Emperor's Death, than he gave Orders for marching the Army of the Allies under his Command, directly towards Frankfort; so that it will be quickly seen what Measures the French intend to take in Germany.

THE History of the LIFE and TIMES of Cardinal WOLSEY.

Throughout the Whole Work are interpos'd Remarks on many contradictory Accounts related of the Cardinal, and great Men his Contemporaries, by most of our Historians, given too much into the common Tract of Popish adulation. Regarding to real, historical Truth, as well as the Defects of the present Nobility and Gentry both of Great-Britain and And also therein are exhibited an Account of the Noble City of London made in the Cause of Liberty; and the Story of the Cardinal wrote by GEORGE CAVENDISH, and the Ancestors of his Grace the Duke of Devonshire.

To be had of the Editor, in Crown and Rolls Court Lane; J. Purser, Printer; and most of the Bookellers in the Country.

Whereas some Gentlemen have apprehended that this relation relates nothing more than what has been already published, &c. the Fact is otherwise, for this is entirely new, and upon a different Plan, and contains the general Affairs of the Cardinal's Time; and among other memorable Events are introduced a full Account of the French Succession, in attempts to get Possession of Burgundy and Brittany, which proved so prejudicial to Great Britain (especially when we were at War as at present with France); the Grand League, the Cambray to ruin the Venetians, not much unlike the French federality against the House of Austria. The whole from Wolsey's Resignation of the Great Seal; the Marriage of Lord Hardwicke; and the Emperor Charles V. Francis I. from the Cardinal's Exit, to their respective State of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge include several material Circumstances and original Papers now published.
